Safety Moment

Following ways to maintain your physical and mental health while working from home.

Positivity is the key. Aim to train your mind to be calm and at peace, under all circumstances. Your Panic button are harmful to yourself and others. Work it out with a smile.

Get up and get moving as much as possible. Aim for 5 to 10 minutes every hour.

Develop a schedule. Includes phases of focused work as well as breaks.

Give your eyes a rest. Gluing them to the computer screen will eventually restrict their optimum caliber. The human eyes can magically roll over 360 degree and increase Blood circulation thereby ultimately improving eyesight.

Maintain a good posture. Ensure that your back is supported, your shoulders are relaxed and that there is no unwelcome pressure on the back of your knees.

Do not sit or stand for too long. Change your posture every few minutes and take regular micro-breaks away from your laptop.

Control your environment. Design your own ideal work environment.

Separate yourself. Especially if there are other people around while you are working, it's important to separate yourself from the business of your household.
